It is with a sense of pride and admiration that I am writing this message for the publication of Consortium: An International Journal of Literary and Cultural Studies. Its all-encompassing approach towards posthumanism, particularly from the standpoint of techno-sentient possibilities, will greatly enrich the scholars. This exploration of concepts, pertaining to the theoretical understanding of the subject, will make the otherwise daunting arena accessible. The journal has my best wishes and constant support for the establishment of its own place in the academic world.

With warm regards,
