It is a great pleasure that 'Consortium: An International Journal of Literary and Cultural Studies' is going to publish the 1st Issue of Volume-2 with a few path breaking ideas on literary and cultural studies within a few days. As we all know that research is an unending pursuit and always requires refinement and polishing, the journal offers avenues for researchers and academicians to present literary issues relevant for the day. Since it is an e-journal, it easily helps the readers to get into touch with so many prolific writers of the contemporary world of literature and offers immense scope in creating a global platform where each of us can share and exchange our ideas that will lead to the enrichment of world aesthetics in a long run. The journal has my best wishes and constant support for the establishment of its own distinct identity in the academic world.

With warm regards,
